Latest on Federal Regulation

Lots of letter-writing going on in Washington, DC these days. Plus horse-trading with Trump Administration appointees. Some refineries continue to push for a change in obligated parties regulations in the Renewable Fuels Standards, using the wonky policy issue to clamor publicly against biofuels in general.

And renewable volume obligations numbers have made it to the White House.

Also, it's nice to see comments supporting biofuels coming from cities like New York, not just from rural areas.

Scroll down for information about regulations related to these topics and others among our latest postings. Others you'll find in the Federal Regulations category online.
