A new correspondent, Margaret Johnston, is covering Washington, DC, area events with insightful reporting. Read her analysis of some Green New Deal discussions. Take away? There need to be more voices who can speak knowledgeably about biofuels at the climate change mitigation tables.

Veteran correspondent, Michael Eggleston, turned a class project into a podcast about Advanced Biofuels USA. Read and listen; links below.

Green New Deal Dialogue Emphasizes Green Growth, Inequalities; Fails to Appreciate Potential Role of Biofuels in Achieving Goals

by Margaret Johnston* (Advanced Biofuels USA) On March 14th in Washington DC, I attended a Green New Deal Dialogue. Speakers came from all over the country to discuss possibilities of green growth, implementation strategies, and current (financial, racism, and energy) inequalities as well as others that may arise. The event ... April 1, 2019 Read Full Article

Rhetoric for Change: Advanced Biofuel USA's Call-to-Action

By Michael Eggleston* (Advanced Biofuels USA) Rhetoric is a fundamental part of social change. According to a 2015 survey conducted by the Pew Research Center, the majority of American scientists support the idea that participation in policy debates and engagement with citizens and journalists is necessary to further their work. Future Activities: Come See Us!

We will be covering the occasional events related to biofuels. Look for us!

Celebrate Earth Day with Advanced Biofuels USA at University of Maryland College Park

Joanne Ivancic and others will be staffing a booth at UMD College Park as part of Engineering Sustainability Day – “Towards Zero Emissions and Beyond” April 22 to bring a biofuels perspective to the event, highlighting low carbon intensity examples.

Join us for a day of energizing discussion as we explore the future role of negative emissions approaches and examine innovative technologies to achieve ZERO emissions and BEYOND. READ MORE

Joining Royal Farms Celebrating Sustainability April 23, 2019 at National Harbor, MD

Advanced Biofuels USA's Bob Kozak and Joanne Ivancic will pop the hood on a 2002 Ford Focus that's been retrofitted to use E85 at the Royal Farms station at National Harbor, MD, to help celebrate the impact in Virginia and Maryland of the USDA Biofuel Infrastructure Project Grant (USDA BIP Grant). Totaling nearly $9.1 million, investments will support ethanol refueling infrastructure like this one, supplied by Protec Fuel. This Earth Week event will show that clean personal transportation is something available today to regular folks with regular vehicles.

The Virginia-Maryland collaboration was the only multi-state proposal selected for award. The $5.8 million in federal funds was matched by $3.3 million from private sector partners. By increasing the number of stations offering higher octane ethanol blends, this collaborative effort resulted in greater access to fueling infrastructure across the region.

Come join us--and fill your flex fuel vehicle with E85. READ MORE

The 2002 Retrofitted Ford Focus at Green Neighbor Festival in Frederick, MD May 4

Capping off a week of sustainability activities at Hood College, the County and City of Frederick join at Baker Park for an educational and fun event with children's activities, vendors, blue gill release, community organizations and alternative vehicles, including Advanced Biofuels USA's display of the 2002 Ford Focus retrofitted to use E85. Bob Kozak will be on hand to explain the retrofit; with Joanne Ivancic there to provide information about the role of renewable fuels in mitigating climate change.
