Federal Legislation

The Green New Deal, or whatever climate legislation will be called, and carbon capture have become hot topics; much of the carbon capture and use legislation favors oil/gas markets for that “use”, however.

Tax credit extenders and other tax legislation are getting attention, as are carbon tax/cost/price.

And various efforts to reform the Renewable Fuel Standard (RFS), particularly to address the small refinery exemptions (SREs), are in the news.

Feinstein, Bennet Introduce Bill to Lock In a Science-Based Method to Determine the Cost of Carbon Pollution

(Office of Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA)) Senators Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.), Michael Bennet (D-Colo.) and 15 of their colleagues reintroduced the Carbon Pollution Transparency Act (S. 1745), legislation to ensure the federal government implements a science-based process to account for the cost of carbon pollution in regulations through a standard metric. The bill was introduced on June 17, 2019. Read Full Article

U.S. Farm State Senators Unveil Bill to Overhaul Biofuel Waiver Program

by Jarrett Renshaw and Richard Valdmanis (Reuters) Two Midwest senators said on Friday they have introduced a bill to reform the Environmental Protection Agency’s opaque biofuel waiver program, which the corn industry says helps oil companies at the expense of farmers here by threatening ethanol demand. The bill, introduced by Republican Deb Fischer of Nebraska and Democrat Jerry Moran of Kansas, would give the EPA more authority to grant biofuel waivers and require companies to prove they are taking steps to reduce emissions. Federal Regulation

The E15 waiver was announced in time for the 2019 summer driving season, aggravating petroleum and allied interests as the RINs issues remain in limbo. "Sub-sim" issues continue.

Small refinery exemptions and resulting "demand destruction" continue as not only legislative, but also regulatory and federal litigation issues.

Trade tariffs are taking a stiff toll on ethanol demand and production, with 2020 candidates and rural economy analysts starting to recognize, or at least discuss, this.

And don’t forget CAFE/SAFE and California regulations interaction. State/region-oriented Low Carbon Fuel Standard-type strategies are bubbling up. And frustration with EPA RFS pathways starts to get attention on Capitol Hill.

Joanne: If you read some of these articles and say to yourself, "That's really important!", you understand the need for biofuels education. Biofuels is not an easy topic to understand.

Reporters (and those who read their articles and make purchasing and investing decisions based on them) may not have much background in renewable energy or transportation fuels and engines, let alone the intricacies and nuances of the places where the rubber of policy meets the road of legislation, regulations and litigation. Heck, even the people working on those laws and regulations could use a refresher.

We are doing something about that every day.
